

Title of Motion Picture

Do Women Pay?

Produced and Manufactured by
PATHE EXCHANGE, Inc.
NEW YORK, N. Y.

Copyrighted

The outside of Hell Hole Tavern looked quiet enough but in doors the owner looked over the bar watching the dancers and merry-makers. His reputation is told in the three word title "He's no good". The owner Jack Dalton by name soon steps out to the front of the saloon and leaning against a pole he thinks of his love. A mouse on his bike rides past for he is to call upon his lady. He calls to her on arriving at her home and just having painted her lips she comes out on the balcony and leaps down to meet him. They kiss and then go off together passing the idle Jack outside of Hell Hole Tavern. He follows the mice and at the falls when the mouse is helping his love across the chasm Jack, the cat pushes him and he goes over. Jack runs off with his girl. A friendly fish helps the mouse over the falls and he follows in pursuit. Jack places his tiny victim in a suitcase just as the mouse overtakes him but, soon shoots him into unconsciousness and gets away again. The cat jumps a freight train but the mouse again in pursuit, upsets the track and dumps the train into the lake. The terrible Jack swims upstream holding the suitcase high in his hand. The mouse at his wits end rings in a general fire alarm. The hook and ladder company comes out. The mouse by way of the ladder goes up into the air and alights on the U. S. Mail airship. Meanwhile, the cat with the suitcase having come out of the water, enters an old mill. After locking two doors, behind him, he opens the suitcase and sets the mouse on the table, confronted by a glass of wine. Seeing by the look on his face, what is going on in his mind she says, "I'd rather be a toad and feed on the foul vapors of a dungeon cell than to be what you would have me be." He chases her around the room and just when he has her in his power and all help fails her, the boy mouse having dropped from the airplane with a parachute, dives down the chimney of the old mill. He bursts into the room through the stove and saying, "Hardboiled, you've drunk your last drink of liquor", he shoots. The cat falls to the floor bleeding. The two mice run away together and agree on the fact that "The Corner Saloon Should go."

This document is from the Library of Congress
“Motion Picture Copyright Descriptions Collection,
1912-1977”

Collections Summary:

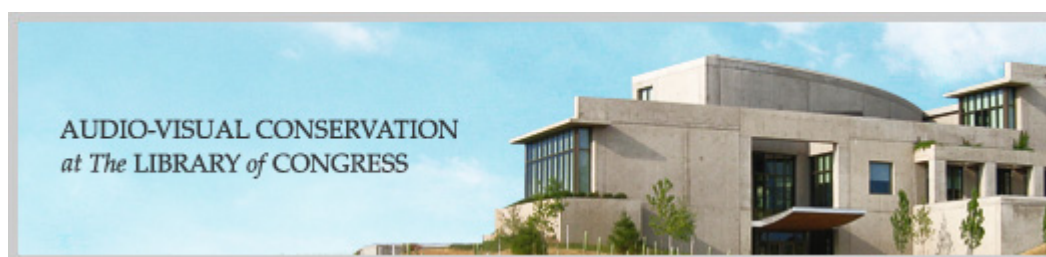

The Motion Picture Copyright Descriptions Collection, Class L and Class M, consists of forms, abstracts, plot summaries, dialogue and continuity scripts, press kits, publicity and other material, submitted for the purpose of enabling descriptive cataloging for motion picture photoplays registered with the United States Copyright Office under Class L and Class M from 1912-1977.

Class L Finding Aid:

<https://hdl.loc.gov/loc.mbrsmi/eadmbrsmi.mi020004>

Class M Finding Aid:

<https://hdl.loc.gov/loc.mbrsmi/eadmbrsmi.mi021002>

National Audio-Visual Conservation Center
The Library of Congress